

Author :

Dr. Sherif Abdel Salam Sherif ¹

Spatial Analysis of Gas Stations in AlKhobar City .

“A Study of Economic Geography Using Geographic Information Systems “

ABSTRACT

Keywords:

Geographical distribution, Directional Distribution, Standard Distance, Employment, Consumption, Optimum Distribution .

ARTICLE INFO :

Article history :

Volume 9, Issue 1, 2020, Page 1- 122 .

Available Online:

https://jbsu.journals.ekb.eg/issue_8794_20997_.html

This study aims to know the spatial distribution of gas stations in Al-Khobar according to several geographical considerations that affect their geographical locations, while clarifying spatial variations and the general pattern of geographical distribution by highlighting the role of geographic information systems technology, and the motives for this variation, to get to know the reasons behind this distribution in addition to Studying the consumption of gas stations and the workforce and their social and economic characteristics, and setting a future vision for the optimal locations for the locations of gas stations in the Khobar City in the future. The study relied on the use of the descriptive approach, which directly depends on observation, classification and statistics operations gas in Al-Khobar.

¹ (Assistant Professor of Economic Geography Faculty of Arts - Port Said University